Musical Notice.

THE undersigned, proposes to the Ladies of Frankfort and Vicinity, to give instructions on the PIANO FORTE, HARP AND GITTAR, and in SINCING. To those families who may honor him with their patronace, he begs to say, that he will spare no pains to impart to his pupils sound Musical knowledge, and a beautiful style of execution.

He has numerous testanomials from persous of standing in Vicksburg. Mississippi, where he taught four years; and from Richmond, in this State, where he has been lately teaching. For his qualifications as a Teacher, he will also refer to Mr. Paul Schmidt, of Levington. (long and favorably known in this State as a Teacher,) and also to Br. Lloyd, of this place.

His MISIC ROOM is on Broadway, adjoining to Colonel Hodges', and to Miss Brown's School Room. He has selected this location for the convenience of his Pupils in Miss Brown's and Mrs. Runyan's Academies.

and Mrs. Runyan's Academies. His terms will be (as enstomary) $25 per session of 20 weeks, where the lessons are taken at his Music Room—or $16 per quarter of 12 weeks, if given at the residence of the pupil, WILLIAM P. STRIBY.

The Pianos belonging to bis pupils, he will keep in tune without any extra charge. Frankfort, Feb. 1, 1847

LEXINGTON, Jan. 20, 1847.

I have known Mr. Scriby for the last six years, three of which I have taught in conjunction with him in the South, and have no lessitation to recummend him to my friends and acquaintances, not only as a scientific Musician of the first class, but also as a Teacher who is inferior to none in this country.

By his gentlemanty deportment and assidnity in teaching, with the rapid improvement of his pupils, he has given every where satisfaction. The undersigned, therefore, feels a confidence in recommending him as a gentleman well worthy of patronage.

KENTUCKY LEGISLATURE.

IN SENATE.

MONDAY'S PROCEEDINGS CONTINUED. Mr. PEYTON resumed his remarks at the point where they had been suspended in the discussion of the power of removal as it existed in the Federal Government, and argued that the State Executive derived the power from a similar constitutional provision with that which vested the power in the Federal Executive. True, the two Governments differed in that, the one was limited by express grants of power and the other was only restricted by express prohibitions. The constitution of Kentucky was modelled after the Federal constitution, and almost indentical in language with it. The power of removal as it existed in the Federal Government was understood by the framers of our constitution, and it was so framed as to leave the power just as it was in the National Government. The strongest objection which was urged against the exercise of this power, was, that by giving to the President the power of removing the Treasurer of the United States. it gave him unlimited control over the public purse. In the arrangement of our constitution, this difficulty was avoided by making the Treasurer elective by the Legislature and responsible to it. The public printer too, was made elective in the same way and for the same reasons-that they should not be subject to the influence and control of the Executive by means of the power of removal.

Mr. P. again adverted to the Illinois case, and argued that there was a marked distinction between the two cases-that in the one the Secretary was entirely independent of the Governor-not required to attest his official acts-that in the other he was the mere Secretary of the Governor and required to affix his attestation to every official act of the Governor, without which it would not be valid and complete. The one was an office without limit except as to good behavior-the other limited by the term for which the appointing power was elected.

Mr. P. read at length from the dissenting opinior of Judge Smith, [one of the Judges who sat in the Illinois case. to sustain the various positions he as sumed in the argument of this case

In reply to the committee that the Governor and Senate constituted the appointing power, he quoted from a decision of Chief Justice Marshall, in which is was decided that appointment to office was the sole act of the President Mr. P. quoted from a congressional discussion or the bill to establish the Department of Foreign Affairs in June 1789. The motion pending, was to strike out a clause which made the head of the department removable at the will and pleasure of the President. Mr. White, Mr. Sedgwick. Mr. Boudinot and others, argued that the constitution in providing for removal from office by impeachment, did no mean to exclude all other means of removal, but that by necessity a more summary mode of action existed, and that it was lodged with the Executive alone -the Senate having the power of trying impeachments, could not be properly associated with him .-That the mode of removal by impeachment was given to the representatives of the people to he used in cases in which the President might be unwilling to remove the incumbent.

Mr. P. then took up the report of the majority of the committee, and commented upon each position assumed in it. He contended that the committee had not fairly presented the case. They argued against the power of removal by the Governor, when he had never exercised or claimed the power. He had only claimed the power of judging of the existence of a vacancy in the office of Secretary and filling that vacancy by granting a commission to Mr. Kinkead until the end of the present session. And upon the grounds of Mr. Hardin's utter want of attention to the duties of the office, and his fuilure to discharge those duties, he had declared the office to be vacant. Mr. P. quoted Bacon's Abridgment as showing what would amount to a torfeiture of an office. A general principle was laid down that in the grant of every office there was an implied condition to discharge the duties faithfully and diliad a failure to do so, ipso facto forfeited the Three particular causes of forfeiture were assigned, ab-user, non-user, and failure. This was the common law of England, but that law so far as not inconsistent, had been adopted by us, and was a much the law here as in England. Mr. P. contend ed that the testimony taken in this case established the forfeiture of the office according to this rule, and that of the vacancy occasioned by this forfeiture the Governor was the sole judge. The tenure of all offices held for the commonwealth is that the incumbent shall discharge the duties of the office, and when he fails to do it he forfeits his office, a vacancy is created and the Governor has a right to fill it.

Mr. P. argued that the powers of the Government of Kentucky were unlimited, save by restrictions in the constitution. The Federal Government could only exercise such powers as had been specially delegated to it in the constitution which established it -all other powers were reserved to the States, and to the people by express reservation, but the very reverse of this was the case in our State Government

The restrictions apon its power must be looked for in the constitution, and except when specially restricted, its power is unlimited. The doctrine of construction applied to the Federal constitution however, by numerous decisions of the Supreme Court, is, that where a power is expressly granted, authority is at the same time given by necessary implication, to use all the means necessary to earry into proper exercise the deligated power.

Mr. P. denied the power of the Senate to judge of a vacancy. It was an executive act, and belonged to the Governor alone. What would be the force and effect of the passage of the resolution reported by the committee! Could it restore Mr. Hardin to office! Could it prevent the Governor from filling the office at the end of the present session, when Mr. Kinkead's commission will expire, by re-appointing Mr. Kinkerd, or appointing any one else Pass the resolution, and it would be an idle ceremomy-a farce-a powerless act. The framers of the constitution would have given power to the Senate to enforce its decision, if it had intended to erect the Senate into a court to revise and nullify the acts of the Executive.

Mr. P. argued against a position assumed by the committee, that the Governor of Kentucky possess ed no powers not expressly granted or clearly implied from those expressly granted, and contended that the constitution gave to the Governor supreme Exexcutive power, in the exercise of which he was limited only by express and special restrictions, contained in the constitution itself. But the admission of the committee's position would not deprive the Governor of the power of removal. The Federal Executive had only such powers as were expressly delegated or clearly implied. There was not a clause, or a single letter in the constitution, giving him the power of removal. How did he exercise it? By implication. It followed the power of appointment. The Governor in this case, he repeated, had not claimed the power of removal, but only the power to declare a vacancy. The committee had placed it on the ground of removal, and he had in reply argued the broad question. But the Governor, in his special message, had not claimed it. He wished to dis-sage placed the act on the ground that the office of mittee on Judiciary; lost. Secretary had become vacant by the conduct of the incumbent, and that he had proceeded to fill the vacancy. Mr. P. again quoted Bacon's Abridgement, showing the grounds of forfeiture of an office.

[Mr. BUTLER requested him to read from same authority the mode of adjudging a forfeiture of office, by a judicial process.]

Mr. PEYTON replied, that such was the course of proceedure in England but not in this country. The whole doctrine had been decided in the Illinois case to which reference had been previously made. In England, a person was held to have a private property in an office, of which he could not be divested but by judicial process. Here no man had a private property in any office. All offices were held for the public good, and such was the theory of our Government

Mr. P. said he had detained the Senate sufficienty long and must bring his remarks to a close. He had endeavored to meet the committee in the false issue they had presented in the question, whether, the Governor had the power to remove the Secretary, instead of the question on the record, whether, when the office was vacated by the acts of the incumbent the Governor had a right so to declare it and proceed to fill the vacuucy. He had endeavored to show that the acts of the Secretary constituted an abandonment and forteiture of his office. Whether or not he had satisfied the Senate, the views he had presented had satisfied his own mind that the position he occupied on this question was sustained both by reason and authority. The Governor, he knew, had not acted in this matter, on his own mere personal opinion, but upon opinions expressed by distinterested men, and some of them the most distinguished jurists in the State upon the same subject. Very few now, outside of this town and its vicinity, differed with the Governor on the ques tion. Be that as it might, the Governor had only exercised a constitutional duty to the country and to himself, and the proof in the case, aside from the question of power, showed that it was n just and righteous act. Was it ever contended that offices in this country were to be held for the benefit of the incumbent. No such thing was ever dreamed of. Public officers were expected to discharge their duties faithfully and diligently, and were not to be continued in office when incapable from any cause to perform their duties, or unwilling to do it, would absent themselves from their offices eight months in the year. It was known to Mr. Hardin before his appointment that he would be required to reside at the scat of government: that there were duties to he performed which would require his daily personal presence, and with this fact staring him in the face he was absent a large portion of the year from the seat of government. This law has all the force of a constitutional provision, it was in force when the constitution was adopted, and the constitution provided that all laws then in force not inconsistent with the constitution should remain in force. It thus was recognized by the constitution. It was a part of the duties then of the Secretary, made so by the law and the constitution, to reside at, and keep his office at the seat of government. No pretext of compliance with this duty had been set up in this case. What were the duties of this Secretary—not of State-but Secretary of the Governor, Secretary of the Executive office, pensman for the Governor. It was known that from misfortune Mr. Hardin wrote so bad a hand as not to be legible to those unaccustomed to it. And he was the scribe, the pen, to record Executive acts. There was something else than the mere pitiful salary of $750 that induced Mr. Hardin to yield the lucrative practice which he knew he was enjoying in his profession and agree to come here and settle down between the hills which surrounded Frankfort. He had no more to say-he felt he had discharged his duty to the country and to himself, and with this he was content. It was unnecessary to say whether he had any feeling in this case. It was unnecessary to speak of his relations with Mr. Hardin or with the Governor. He was always willing that his acts alone should be interpreted fairly and properly, without any expression from him of the motives which directed them. Adopt the resolution, and would it restore Mr. Hardin to office, or would it turn Mr. Kinkead out read of office! Would it prevent the Governor from the exercise of any of the powers vested in him by the constitution! The act would be nugatory and vain, so far as its effect in this particular case was concerned; but the Senate were assuming an Executive power not granted to it in the constitution. The he an end to the liberties of the people. He hegged Senators to pause, before they passed the resolntion. It would all the office, and the nomination of one of those tion. The SPEAKER laid before the Senate the following communication from the Governor:

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives:

It has been communicated to me, in a manner not to be doubted, that since the commencement of the present session of the General Assembly, William Henry, who, and N. Craig, Esq., were elected keepers of the Penitentiary until March 1849, has departed this life. If the principle applicable to officers at common law govern the case, the death of Mr. Henry terminates the authority of both keepers, and the institution is at present without any legally authorized agent and manager. I have therefore deemed it due to the interest of the Commonwealth, to present the case to the General Assembly,

And, whereas, the bill now under consideration in the Senate, provides for taking a vote in August of the present year, which if passed would tend much to increase instead of allaying the excitement which has existed in said county for several years in relation to their seat of Justice, therefore, resolved that said bill and amendments be laid upon the table. So the bill was not laid on the table. After some liseussion, the bill was made the special order for Monday next. Orders of the Day.

The House then took up the report of the committee of the whole, on the bill to incorporate the Licking and Lexington Railroad Company. The amendments adopted in committee, were adopted. Mr. A. G. BOTTS offered an amendment, which

Mr. McHENRY spoke in opposition to the bill. The title of the road, he conceived, was wrongly stated. It would be more correct to call it the Cincinnati Railroad. The real question before the House, was whether the products of the State of Kentucky should be permitted to be drawn off to the State of Ohio.

Mr. McH. opposed the bill, because he believed would detract from the revenue of the State derired from the improvements of the Kentucky river. It was true, a tax was imposed upon the stock of the company; but this would not produce an amount equal to the deficit caused by the diversion of travel and trade from the Kentucky river.

Mr. McH. stated his objections to the bill at some ength, and alloded. in the course of his remarks, another project, (the Louisville and Lexington Railroad) which he would advocate before the House in a few days, and which he hoped to be able to show, would not be open to the objections which were urged against this measure. Mr. PAGE remarked that he hoped he occupied a ifferent position in regard to this bill, than to be governed by local feelings. His objections to the pill resulted from higher motives. It was not necessary at this day to go into any argument to show the idvantages of railroads. It had been suggested by the Speaker, that lines of railroads were in process f construction throughout the whole extent of the Union. It was desirable that Kentucky should place herself on high ground, and do nothing which will interfere with this grand project, which had been alluded to by the Speaker. Mr. P. then explained to the House, the modes in which this road would interfere in the construction of the great work in which Kentucky was so deeply interested. It was possible that the railroad would be a great convenience to the section of country through which it passed. But individual convenience should always yield to the general welfare. He would be glad to see the counties along the line of the road receive all the benefits of the road, but nis judgment convinced him of the impolicy of the

He alluded to the effect of cities in increasing the wealth and adding to the population of a State, con-tending that the commerce of a State, if possible, should be made to contribute to cities upon her own soil. Evening Session. Mr. PAGE proceeded with ns remarks which vere interrupted by the House's taking a recess It had been suggested that the State of New Jersey had permitted a Railroad to pass through her bor-ders to a city without the State. It was true, and New Jersey derived no benefit from the terminus of that road. He again asserted that no instance could be found where a State had afforded the means for carrying her trade from the heart of her own State to a foreign city. It was the interest of the State to protect her own commerce, to protect her own citizens, and to make ndividual convenience yield to the general good. It should not be permitted to interfere with the grand scheme of a Railroad from the south to the Ohio, Mr. WORTHAM moved to recommit the bill with by any local measure. It is suicidal to the interinstructions to report a general bill, which was sub- ests of Kentucky to permit that road to be interiered with. THE SUB TREASURY AND ITS OPERATION .- The practical operations of this disjointed and unseemly scheme of finance, is fast bringing its friends to see there is no virture in it; and that it is wholly impracticable to carry out the provisions of the law .-For example: An agent of the United States arrived in Saint Louis a few days since, from Galena, Illin is, as the bearer of ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS, hard money. The specie was consigned to Captain Bell, an officer of the Government at St. Louis, and the expenses paid by him for the transportation of this sum, amounted to Eighty Dollars-eight per cent on the amount transmitted. The rate of exchange between Galena and St Louis cannot, we imagine, exceed one half of one per cent. The money could have been transmitted at a cost of five dollars through the banks or brokers, and the government would have saved thereby the sum of seventy-five dollars. The sum it is true is small, but the rate per cent is enermous.

In November last, the Government paid a gentleman in New York, the sum of $3.950, for transporting from New York to New Orleans, the sum of $503,000. This could have been forwarded by means of checks or certificates from the banks for nothing. Thus is this Sub Treasury sapping the Treasury of

THE WASHINGTON UNION IN TROUBLE. - In the Senate, on the 10th, Mr. YULEE, of Florida, a Democrat, offered a resolution to expel the reporter for the Union from a place in the gallery of the Senate, because his reports were partial and unjust, and charging the editors with uttering a libel upon the character of that body in a publication contained in the Union of the 9th.

We have received a communication from Louisville on the subject of the proposed Railroad from Frankfort to Louisville. Will the writer be kind enough to send us his name-we cannot publish it without the name of the author.

For the Commonwealth.

FRANKFORT, FEB. 16th, 1847. Dear Sir:- To prevent any possible misconception of my remarks submitted to the House in favor of granting a charter to a company, to construct a railroad from Covington to Lexington, which might be induced by your reporter's brief notice, I take leave to say, that I did not advocate the policy of making such improvements by the State of Kentucky, Legislators, to allow any portion of the citizens of purpose of joining in Procession the State, who might desire to do so, to expend their own money in making turnpikes, railroads, or any other improvements deemed advantageous to them in transporting their surplus products to market, and in bringing back for their own consumption, as cheaply as possible, such articles of foreign growt as they might want. Respectfully yours, LESLIE COMBS.

From the Baltimore American.

LOR. Washington, Fferuary 3. United States Senate: The resolution of thanks to Gen. Taylor and his army, for their gallantry in storming Monterey, offered some days ago by Mr.

ond time. On motion of Mr. Crittenden, this resolution was laid on the table, and the resolution from the House on the same subject was taken up.

Mr. SPEIGHT moved to strike out the proviso that nothing in the resolution should be construed into an approval of the capitulation at Monterey. He was not the man to thank with one hand and censure with the other. He considered this proviso as a direct vote of censure, not only upon General Taylor, who sanctioned the capitulation, but upon those gallant officers, and among them his own personal friend, (Col. Jefferson Davis) from his own Secretary communicating sundry resolutions from State, who made the terms. He could never consent to vote for such a censure.

Mr. ATCHISON moved to lay the resolution upon the table. Lost 21 to 26.

Mr. SEVIER did not see that the proviso implied censure. It only gave an opportunity to those who were disposed to vote the thanks to do so without being committed in favor of the capitulation.

Mr. JARNAGIN said there was not one word in the body of the resolution about the capitulation or

Mr. SEVIER called for the reading of the resoluion, and after it was read, he said he had no objection to striking out the proviso, as he found it said nothing about the capitulation. He did not approve of the capitulation, and only wished not to commit imself in favor of it.

Mr. J. M. CLAYTON said that, as the Senator rom Arkansas had stated, he disapproved of the capitulation, he would be glad to know from him what vere the reasons for that disapproval. Mr. SEVIER replied that lie was not disposed to iscuss that question

Mr. CRITTENDEN was afraid that party spir it was somehow or other mixed up with this questio n. This should not be. General Taylor was the leader of the army of the country, and was devoting hin 1elf with all his energy to the duties of his command. If it was only known how exclusively he was devoted to the maintenance of the honor and interests of the country, no partizan in politics even could give him one unkind word.

While the whole country was rejoiced and grate ful to the gallant soldier and his gallant army for their brilliant services at Monterey, men in Congress seemed to be looking for some circumstance by which they could tarnish the lustre of the brilliant success which had attended our arms. It would seem as if they intended to drug the very cup which they held

This resolution, as it stood, was a censure not only npon Taylor, who assented to the capitulation, but upon Worth, and Davis, and Henderson, who aranged its terms. What would the whole army think of this! Men who stood upon the point of honorof such thanks as these! They would scorn them.

Mr. SEVIER attempted to justify the course of his party in this matter, hy a reference to the course of the Whigs upon the bill to remit Gen. Jackson's

Mr. J. M. CLAYTON then made a very forcible speech in defence of Gen. Taylor, whom he honored more for his humanity than his bravery. He adverted to the evil consequences which would result should this proviso be sanctioned. It would be equivalent to saying to our army that they must come out red handed from every battle-that they must bathe their arms in the blood of all within their reach-even of women and children. He considered the resolution as a side blow aimed at Taylor, but he stood so firm in the affections of the American people that it could not affect him. It would have no effect but to arouse the American people more strongly in his favor.

Mr. BAGBY made a speech in opposition to the capitulation, little creditable to his head, and less to his heart. We had nothing to do, he said, with the blood of foreign women and children. It was no oncern of ours how much of it was shed

The proviso was stricken out-33 to 15. Mr. WEBSTER offered a substitute for the resolution, which was agreed to, 26 to 23, and it finally passed, yeas 43 nays 0.

Senate then adjourned.
